HARD COAL TRADE IS WORRIED; HIT A VERY VITAL BLOW

Tie-Ups and Suspension Of Operations Proved Most Disastrous

COMPETITORS GOT BUSY

Educate Public to Use Various Substitutes, Which It Did

(Editor's Note: With the decline in production of anthracite coal during the past ten years, has come a loss of markets which has alarmed civic and industrial leaders throughout the hard coal regions.

Matthew F. Boyd, economist and journalist, who has made an exhaustive survey of the situation, outlines his views on the subject today in the second of a series of articles prepared for The Courier by International News Service. Boyd sees co-operative movements on the part of the public, the operators and the miners as a laudable effort to rebuild the industry.)

By E. L. Rawley
(I.N.S. Staff Correspondent.)

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 19.—For the first time in history, the anthracite industry is worried.

"It has reason to be worried and there is some justification for a touch of fear accompanying its worrying," Matthew F. Boyd, nationally known coal expert and journalist, told International News Service today.

"Throughout a century anthracite did as it chose," Boyd said. "It scorned every consideration except profit. It fought legislation to which it objected and when laws were passed against its opposition it laughed at them."

"Anthracite was and is a natural monopoly," he continued. "If it is no longer a monopoly in the eyes of the law it remains an economic monopoly—a monopoly in fact."

"In its monopolistic nature lay the strength of anthracite. It capitalized that strength until it is valued at upwards of a billion dollars today."

"Tie-ups and suspension of operations in the anthracite regions two years ago proved disastrous to the industry," Boyd said.

While the great hard coal workings lay idle, bituminous operators, ever alert for new fields, and the comparatively new enterprises sponsoring the use of oil for fuel, were busy. They took advantage of this condition in the anthracite regions to strike a vital blow at the hard coal markets.

"Anthracite was hit where it hurt most—in its pocketbook," Boyd said.

"Soft coal invaded New England and the whole anthracite consuming field, and with soft coal has come the coal heater, the electric and gas heaters and other alternatives. A few years ago every apartment house in Washington, D. C., for example, used anthracite. Today, scarcely one apartment house in the national capital uses it. They use soft coal or oil burners," Boyd said.

Campaigns launched by the bituminous operators have induced householders of the East to try West Virginia's "smokeless" coal and as a result anthracite lost 150,000 tons a year, Boyd estimated.

The various tie-ups had their effect in New England, he said, and more anthracite markets were lost.

It is to remedy conditions such as those described by Boyd that thousands of merchants, operators and miners representatives are sponsoring a series of booster meetings, to culminate in the gigantic Mount Carmel Co-operative Conference, Nov. 9, 10, and 11—having as their object formulation of plans to revive and stimulate the waning anthracite market.

(The public, silent partner in the struggle to regain lost anthracite markets which has attracted the attention of the economic world, is preparing to speak at the anthracite conference at Mount Carmel. Tomorrow, Boyd will tell what, in his opinion, that public will have to say.)

Convention of W. C. T. U. To Be Held In Scranton

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 19 (I.N.S.)—The 1928 convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Pennsylvania will be held in Scranton, it was decided at the closing session here of the 53rd annual meeting of the order.

An anti-smoking resolution directed at school teachers and expressed opposition to the seating of Senator-elect William S. Vare because of his stand on prohibition were the highlights of the closing session. The W. C. T. U. resolution appealed to the State Department of Education to refuse admission to teachers' training schools of persons using tobacco.

County Approves Wider Road To Willow Grove

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 19.—The County Commissioners in session Monday approved the ultimate right of way filed by the State Highway Department to be recorded in Bucks County, providing for the widening of the Doylestown and Willow Grove concrete highway from a point near the trolley station in Doylestown to the Montgomery county line at Horsham township. The new width calls for 100 feet outside of the borough and for a slight widening in towns and boroughs.

From time to time, similar rights of way are being brought before the commissioners for approval. In some cases where the plans were not approved by the commissioners, the Highway Department made the suggested changes and then had them recorded.

The ultimate rights of way being filed call for widening of all the state routes at some future time. This means that all houses and buildings at the present time are shown on the plans, but that in the future when the road is widened, houses and buildings erected since the recording of the plans and not shown on the plan, cannot be used in collecting damages. The state will only be liable for the houses and buildings now on the plans.

LILLI DILLENZ ADMIRES COURAGE OF RUTH ELDER

Great Pleasure To Meet The Daring American Girl

LAUGHED AT THE FALL

By Peggy Ward

(Copyright 1927 by International News Service)

HORTA, THE AZORES, Oct. 19.—From one daring woman unafraid of the perils of trans-Atlantic flying to a sister who has proven her lack of fear of the same circumstances—admiration!

This was the impression left with me today by Lilli Dillenz, Viennese actress who is to be a passenger aboard the Junker plane when it sets off across the Atlantic for New York. Fraulein Dillenz was speaking of Miss Ruth Elder when she said:

"I must acknowledge true admiration for her unerring courage, her suave, agreeable and loving disposition, and her kindly interest in our own accomplishments."

"It has given me the greatest pleasure to meet the daring American girl with the dancing eyes and rippling laugh," declared the Viennese actress. "She is captivating and lovable and appears to be out of place in a plane."

"She told me that when she fell into the ocean, she was obliged to laugh. This is perfectly true—Ruth always laughs, is always cheerful and nothing dampens her feelings."

"We offered her a seat in our plane on its westbound trip, but, although she was ready to go, she could not accept as she was under contract."

Will Inject Life Into The Fall-Sinclair Affair

By George E. Durno
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—A little life was scheduled to be injected into the Fall-Sinclair conspiracy trial today with the appearance of the first witnesses.

Martin W. Littleton, defense attorney, still has an hour or more of rather dull "background" to expound to the mixed jury, but after he has finished and the routine witnesses called to properly identify documentary evidence, Owen J. Roberts, of Federal counsel, plans to call Assistant Secretary of Interior E. C. Finney.

Finney's testimony, if it parallels that given in the civil cases which resulted in the voiding of the Teapot Dome oil lease, will be the Government's first blow at the defense.

As assistant U. S. Attorney General Albert B. Fall, Finney was called in for advice on the leasing of the naval oil reserves, part of which ultimately went to Harry F. Sinclair, co-defendant in the present trial. Finney previously has testified that he suggested the name of a man to be called in as technical advisor, but that this man was rejected by Fall because he held to the conservation policy which would have retained the oil fields, undrilled, by the Government. In the civil cases, the Assistant Secretary said, in effect, that Fall had told him to "Keep Teapot Dome locked up in the drawer"—that Fall, would handle it alone.

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 19. — Germano DeMarcus, of Bristol, was released under $3,000 bail at noon today in the Court of Quarter Sessions by Judge William C. Ryan, after a statement had been received by the Court from Dr. H. Doyle Webb, of Bristol, to the effect that Frank McCole, whom DeMarcus is alleged to have shot on September 25th, is out of danger.

DeMarcus will appear before the Grand Jury on December 5th, to answer a charge of aggravated assault and battery, with attempt to kill.

END DISTILLERY SUIT; OWNERSHIP FIXED

Verdict for Plaintiff Over Ownership of Personal Property

GETS $300.00 DAMAGES

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 19.—In Court No. 2 Monday, in the case of Joseph C. Trainer and John A. Trainer, trading as Edward Trainer, Philadelphia, against the Philadelphia Pure Rye Whiskey Distilling Company of Pennsylvania, Judge Samuel E. Shull, of Stroudsburg, directed a verdict in favor of the plaintiff so far as it relates to goods mentioned in the replevin suit.

The goods mentioned included a large number of whiskey bottles over which there was a dispute of ownership between the plaintiff and defendant. The jury rendered a verdict for $300 damages for the plaintiff.

The distillery is located at Eddington and the property has been in litigation for several years.

POTATO GROWERS OF CO. BREAK ALL RECORDS

Walter S. Bishop, Doylestown, Holds the County Records

609.67 BUSHELS TO ACRE

Bucks County potato growers have broken all records in the county for potato yields. Walter S. Bishop of Doylestown holds the county record with 609.67 bushels from one measured acre. Elwood Moyer, Perkasia, is a close second with 606.85 bushels from a measured acre.

Ten Bucks county growers have qualified this year for the Keystone 400-Bushel Potato Club. They are: W. S. Bishop, Doylestown, 609.67 bu.; Elwood Moyer, Perkasia, 606.85 bu.; O. Rosenberg, Quakertown, 522.7 bu.; H. H. Baum, Hilltown, 521.7 bu.; Mahlon Rosenberg, Quakertown, 511.18 bu.; C. A. Tidlow & Son, Pennsburg, 484.5 bu.; Loux Brothers, Quakertown, 454.6 bu.; Henry Bauman, Quakertown, 439.6 bu.; J. Cooper Piddock, Washington Crossing, 416.7 bu.; A. S. Mumbauer, Quakertown, 411 bu.

These are very fine yields and the growers show the results of proper methods in growing potatoes. Eight used certified Russet seed, and two used first-year certified. Nine of the ten plowed a sod down and one plowed under corn stubble. The average number of sprays was 12, the highest being 14 and the lowest 9.

The potatoes from these patches are in fine condition. Very little trouble with rotting, due to the prevention of blight infection by thorough spraying.

DEFENSE OPENS IN BIG DAMAGE SUIT AGAINST DOCTOR

Defendant's Attorney Moves For A Compulsory Non-Suit

JUDGE RULES AGAINST

Claims That It Is A Case For The Jury To Decide

(Special to Courier)

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 19.—The defense opened yesterday in the $50,000 damage suit brought by Mrs. Anna H. Frederick, of Perkasia, against Dr. Otto H. Strouse, of the same place, for injuries she says she sustained from X-ray burns from the machine of Dr. Strouse in 1923.

In closing the plaintiff's case yesterday, Howard I. James, one of the attorneys for the defendant, moved for a compulsory non-suit, stating his contention to Judge William C. Ryan that it is a well established law in Pennsylvania that an X-ray burn alone is not evidence of carelessness, and that in this case it has not been shown by the plaintiff's witnesses that Dr. Strouse did not use reasonable care in the treatment of Mrs. Frederick, and that the plaintiff case failed to establish negligence.

Judge Ryan stated that in his opinion, it was a case for the jury and the defense opened.

Mrs. Strouse, on the opening day of the trial, stated that Dr. Strouse treated her for a tumor, giving her a series of X-ray treatments.

Called as the first witness in the defense, Dr. Strouse, the defendant, said that he has practiced in Perkasia since 1912, with the exception of a period during the war, when he was in the service. He is a graduate of Medico-Chi in 1909 and has specialized in radio-therapy since that time. In France during the war he was a member of the army school of radiology at Sur-Meuse and since 1913, with the exception of the war period has been in charge of the X-ray department of the Grandview Hospital, Sellersville.

Dr. Strouse testified that since 1919 alone he has made approximately 7,000 X-ray exposures in his office at Perkasia and 10,000 others at the hospital, which included about 400 for treatment purposes.

"Mrs. Frederick came to my office in 1923," testified Dr. Strouse. "She told me she had trouble and after an examination and a history of the case I diagnosed her trouble as a certain class of tumor. From the condition I believed then it would become malignant or cancerous. I advised Mrs. Frederick that the growth could be treated surgically, by use of the X-ray or by radium treatment, but that in my opinion the most satisfactory treatment at the time would be the X-ray, followed by an operation. I did not tell her at the time that it was a malignant tumor."

"On August 31, 1923, she came and told me that she had talked the affair over with her husband and that she had decided to submit to the treatment that I thought best."

"On September 3, 1923, I started by X-ray treatments at my office in Perkasia."

"I noticed no redness on her body. On September 27, there was no redness visible or I would not have continued. She came back on October 8, 1923, and I discovered some redness. I then gave her ultra-violet rays to prevent any further damage. I treated her with ultra-violet rays six times in October, 1923. When she left my place on October 19, the wound looked very good and was healing nicely."

"Mrs. Frederick did not come to me for some time and I went to her home. On November 9 I found that she had called in another physician from out of town and I saw that the wound had increased in size and was very much worse than when I last treated her. At that time I could do nothing, but later I gave her more violet rays treatment."

Dr. Strouse, in answer to a question asked by Mark Thatcher, one of his attorneys, said that the filters were in his X-ray machine during every treatment. The plaintiff contention is that the machine was used without the proper use of filters.

The doctor denied that he had said to Mrs. Frederick that he made a mistake in the diagnosis of the case.

"I did say," continued Dr. Strouse, "I cannot see why this has happened. I made no mistake. I used a recognized formula for the treatment of the case and the proper technique."

"I did tell her son that his mother was suffering from a fibroid tumor and that in my opinion it would probably turn to cancer. I treated her for that condition."

In the presentation of evidence for the plaintiff, Dr. Henry Graver, of Royersford, was called and asked what took place when he and Dr. Strouse held a consultation in the case of Mrs. Frederick.

"Dr. Graver advised me to give Mrs. Frederick all the morphine she could stand. He suggested absolutely no treatment. I gave her some morphine tablets as advised by Dr. Graver, and her husband brought them back to me and said she would not take any more."

Men's Bible Class Formed At Presbyterian Church

A men's Bible class has been organized in the Bristol Presbyterian Church and judging from the present indications, it is going to be one of the largest and most interesting in Bristol.

Three weeks ago preliminary steps were taken and last Sunday a permanent organization was formed and officers elected as follows:

President, Russell B. Carty; vice-president, Dr. G. Austin Bisbee; secretary and treasurer, William J. Lefters.

The class is especially fortunate in securing a good teaching staff composed of Warren P. Snyder, principal of the Bristol High School; and J. E. W. Tracy.

One of the outstanding features of the class is the fact that each Sunday thus far the attendance has been double that of the previous Sunday. The class meets at 10 o'clock Sunday morning in the church study.

SCHOOL PAPER GIVES HISTORY OF HUMLEVILLE

"The Playwickian" Publishes Interesting Account of Town Near Here

MANY NEW PHASES

The "Playwickian," the weekly publication of the Langhorne-Middletown High School, in a recent issue, published a brief but interesting history of Humleville.

On numerous occasions previously, accounts of the settling and growth of Humleville have been given, but the following, which "The Playwickian" puts forth, contains some phases which will be new to many.

"The site of this town was said to have been covered by Penn's grant to Henry Paulin, Harry Paxson, and William Carter. The original name was Milford, derived from 'mill-ford' the mill at the ford across the Neshaminy, the first erected on that stream and driven by its waters. The present name is derived from that of John Hulme, who settled there about the close of the eighteenth century. He purchased a tract of land with water privileges, taking possession in 1792."

"The town site was laid out in 1796-99, a post-office opened with a weekly mail, and the name of the place changed to that of the new owner. Additions were made to the corn and grist mills; a fulling mill, merchant, flour, and saw mills were erected, and those were followed by a machine shop. In a few years the village had grown into a place of thrifty dwellings with stores, workshops, etc., and a stone bridge had been built over the Neshaminy."

"In the autumn, 1809, when Josiah Quincy, Boston, with his family, was on his way to Washington to attend Congress, he stopped over night at Humleville, and was entertained by Mr. Hulme. The latter rose from poverty to wealth and influence by the force of his own character. He became one of the most respected men in the county, was several times elected to the Legislature, became first president of the Farmers' Bank of Bucks County, and held other positions of honor and trust."

"As Mr. Hulme's sons grew up he taught them practical business habits and mechanical pursuits, gave them an interest in all that was carried on and settled them around him. For several years Mr. Hulme would not allow a public house to be opened, entertaining travelers at his own dwelling, but when the growth of the village forced him to change his policy, he built a tavern but prohibited a bar. After the War with England, 1812-15, a crash came, and disaster overtook the sons. He died in 1817."

"The following incident is related about Humleville: About 1834, two little girls, of six and seven years, respectively, lived in the village—one, Martha Crealy, an orphan child, adopted by Mary Canby, widow of Joshua Canby, who lived in the dwelling lately owned and occupied by Eliza Prall; the other, Mary Parsons, who lived with her aunt, Mary Nelson, on the site of the late William Titton's residence. The girls played in the yard around the house, often tossing and catching acorns; both died before reaching ten years, but they left monuments to their memory. In each yard a little acorn sprang up; that in Mr. Titton's residence being a red oak, and the other being a Spanish oak. The trees were named Martha, and Mary, respectively."

"In 1872, Humleville was incorporated into a borough, which gave it an impetus forward. Among the industries established there were a cotton factory, in 1831, a large weaving shop and coverlet factory. In the village at one time there were two churches, the Grace Episcopal, founded 1831, the Methodist, founded 1844, a public and private school, lodges of Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, and Good Templars, Young Men's Christian Association, two building associations, a Fire Insurance Company, organized in 1842. Johnson's building contained a handsome hall said to seat 350 persons. A bridge across the Neshaminy built after the freshet of 1865, was said to be the highest bridge spanning the stream. A new iron bridge was

HEAVY RAINS SWELL STREAMS; RIVER IS ABOVE NORMAL, TOO

Low-Lands Are Submerged And Wash-Outs Reported

NEW JERSEY HARD HIT

Miller at Hightstown Loses His Life Opening The Flood Gates

Rain, rain and more rain. This has been the program since Monday. All of the nearby streams are swollen beyond the normal stage. The water in the Delaware River rose a foot up until midnight. Up until eight o'clock last night a total of 2.03 inches of rain had fallen in the 24 hour period.

Streets have been flooded and the low lands near here are submerged.

Some of the old residents of Bucks County have recalled that 50 years ago on October 16th a very disastrous storm did a tremendous amount of damage. Four inches of rain fell, according to the files of old newspapers. Near Phoenixville an engine fell 30 feet into a gap left by the washing away of a bridge, says this old record. "Roads, bridges, and the canal suffered from one end of the county to the other."

Evidently the storm was one of the worst ever experienced as the papers were largely given over to news of the damage it did.

A WORTHY PURPOSE

"To foster, encourage and advance the science of aviation!" For this object has another organization, had its inception in Bristol.

At one time, for convenience's sake, say five years ago, Bristol counted among its vehicles seen about town, the same as those counted in any other ordinary town in the northern part of the Western Hemisphere.

Gradually has the metamorphosis taken place. First the appearance of the site of the Merchant Shipbuilding plant changed to a marked degree. Upon the roof of one of the larger buildings was painted in huge letters the name of the corporation and town, telling to the winged folk that Bristol was moving forward.

Slowly this plant, where airplanes were to be built, grew in size; the employees increased in number, and a short time after its establishment in the borough planes were completed.

As contracts were received for larger quantities and bigger planes, the need of a testing and landing field was realized. Since that time planes have gone from Bristol into many parts of the world. Today steel birds made in Bristol are used by the U. S. Army; by private corporations; and for passenger service.

The latest step, which took place last week, is the renewed activity of the organization known as the Keystone chapter of the National Aeronautical Association. This is another milestone in the progress, not only of the local airplane plant, but of the borough as well.

This is in line with the work advocated by "Cy" Caldwell, member of the expedition which searched for Nungesser and Gali. "The time is fast approaching when a town not measuring up in the aeronautical world will be a back number."

Bristol's citizens will not permit it to be a back number.

ATTRACTION OF HIGH PRICES

An investigator has found that the United States government pays 23 cents a quart for ink that costs the private consumer $1.25, and that typewriter ribbons which John Smith buys at from $8 to $10 a dozen are available to Uncle Sam for $1.67 a dozen. He does not argue that the spread between the two prices is too great, but points out the reasons for the disparity. However, he does condemn the wide difference in price the public pays for patented articles and the price of staples from which they are made.

A widely advertised mineral oil for medicinal purposes promises a start on the road to health for one dollar. For that dollar is given a pint of oil which at wholesale can be had for seventy cents a gallon. Even allowing the retailer a profit of 100 per cent., that pint of oil should be available to the consumer at 25 cents.

What the argument overlooks is that the consumer pays the difference for education. Mineral oil offered in bulk as a cure for constipation would have a much harder time winning a market than the same oil in an attractive pint bottle. Given the psychology of the American public, there may be such a thing as offering a commodity at too low a price. Confidence is in part the product of costliness. Once the mineral oil habit has been popularized by the dollar bottle, the consumer is likely to start thinking of getting his oil at a lower cost. This has happened to commodities more important than mineral oil.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Fisher, of Frankford, spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Blitt.

Many local hunters are now busy reconditioning their rifles and shot guns for the coming season, which will open November 1st. Many pheasants have been reported, with but few rabbits. A large number of these hunters will invade the hills and forests in Luzerne and Pike counties for both deer and bear. The Independent Gun Club, here, will hold a meeting within the next two weeks to arrange for their fall and winter trap shooting. This is a busy little gun club, and they expect to erect a club house this season.

Mr. C. D. Oakley's car was badly damaged in Trenton some short time ago, which was turned over when struck by another car.

Mr. Warren Randall was injured in a fall from a ladder on which he was working on last Monday. His injuries were minor.

DANVILLE, Pa., Oct. 19 (I.N.S.)—Mrs. Sarah Heim, 74, today is hailed by residents here as the heroine of a fire which swept the Danville business district early Wednesday.

The aged woman, awakened by the flames which menaced her apartment on the third floor of a downtown building, called to her daughter, Miss Gertrude Heim, and together they fought their way to the ground floor.

The aged woman stopped, however, and bidding her daughter to follow her example, pounded on the doors of HARRISBURG, Oct. 19 (I.N.S.)—Resumption of court sessions after the summer recess is reflected in the large number of automobile license revocations and blacklistings made public yesterday by the State Department of Highways.

There were fifty-four license revocations and nineteen names were placed on the prohibitory list during the week.

Thirty of the revocations and twelve of the blacklistings were caused by intoxication. Despite the large number of revocations only six were for reckless driving.

Eight Pittsburgh men were included in the list of fifteen who lost their licenses because of larceny of automobiles. They were Edward Laszkiewicz, James Masonski, Ernest Ford, Edward Jones, Norman Cook, "Doc" Fehory, Clyde Trevis and Foster Thornton.

Included in the list for intoxication were Herbert M. Fulton, Stephen Cegolka and John F. Lynch, all of New Castle; Harold H. Nelson, Oil City, and Frank Frutchery, Stroudsburg.

Edward T. Gorman, of Allentown, was among those who lost licenses for reckless driving.

SYNOPSIS

In 1896 Bob, son of Hank Armstrong, a horse fancier, knowing his father's hatred of machines, is secretly inventing gasoline engines and openly courting Rose Robbins. Several years later, Hank, roused to fury by his discovery of his son's love for automobiles, horsechips the boy. Bob is saved from a cruel beating only through the intervention of Rose. Stung by Steve Bentley's taunts about the affair, Bob thrashes his rival in love. Bob decides he must make his own way in the world and asks Rose to promise to marry him on his return. She promises, saying that he can trust her to be true. Now—

CHAPTER XIII—Continued

Bob continued his way up the street, reviewing the events of the past hour moodily. He was glad Steve had given him the opportunity of a fight. It did his heart good to take that crack at his rival. He had, up to this time, restrained himself when he felt like knocking the young man down. But now he had vented his dislike of all Steve's doings, and had settled innumerable old scores, such as the incidents in the drug store and at the Mayor's reception.

Furthermore, the fight had removed, to some extent, the anger that had rankled in his mind when his father had struck him. Then he had been unable to strike back. But now he had rid himself of all the repression he had suffered when he had dropped his raised fists in respect for parenthood and age. Like a fog bank gradually lifting over a storm tossed sea, the mists in his mind began to clear. True, his brain still fomented with the hurt and humiliation just received, but now he felt a man again. He must begin to face facts, realities. He squared his shoulders, as though taking a new lease on life, and paced on.

"All I want is your promise to wait for me, Rose."

It was necessary for him to come to a definite decision, he thought. He could no longer remain in Maple City—not because he was afraid of the jeers of any of his companions, for he had completely killed any future attempts at such rivalry by licking Steve. But insofar as he could see, Maple City held no opportunity for his work. His last home tie was severed. He could no longer remain under the same roof with his father. He must strike out on his own. Go some place where he could find his chance and prove what he could do.

Yes, that was it. He must prove his ideas. The town might laugh and scoff, but he showed them. He'd prove to his father, too, that machines were to have their day. He'd earn the respect of even the unbelievers. But where to go—what to do. He might turn to the nearest large city, Detroit. There, he knew, this man, Henry Ford, and someone called Barney Oldfield, were striding ahead in their experiments with automobiles. If he could only obtain a position there!

But what about Rose? His thoughts ran swiftly to the girl who had so bravely faced his father's wrath in his defense. He hated to leave Rose—but could he take her with him? No, that would be impossible. He had no money, no job, nothing to offer a girl brought up in a well-to-do home. He couldn't ask Rose to face poverty, perhaps even defeat, with him. He'd have to go it alone.

But suppose, while he was gone, Rose should marry some one else. No, no! That couldn't—mustn't happen. He realized now that it was Rose he wanted—now, when he couldn't ask her to come to him. Perhaps he had better talk things over with the girl. He didn't want to let her to years of indefinite waiting, yet he couldn't leave without having some understanding. He must go—he knew that. He turned his footsteps in the direction of the Mayor's house.

CHAPTER XIII

As he opened the gate of the Robbins' home he saw Rose, swinging in the hammock on the front porch. At the sight of the girl his new-found courage failed him, and he would have turned back. But his indecision lasted for only a moment. He took a deep breath and ran up the steps.

"I came, because I had to talk to you, Rose," he began, pulling a high-backed rocking chair closer to the swing. "It's about my going away."

Rose nodded. A sickening feeling swept over her. What if Bob left without—without—? She couldn't face it. To see Bob go without saying anything to her—without telling her he loved her. Yet he had come to talk to her. But it might be of his plans. And was she to have any place in those plans? Bob had so often come to talk over his problems—but they were problems that had nothing to do with her heart's desire.

"It's just this, Rose," Bob was going on, haltingly. "I don't feel that I can stay here any longer after what happened—what—well, you know, what happened this morning."

"I know, Bob. It's all right. Let's not talk about that," Rose found her voice and tried to help the boy along. "But where do you think you're going, and what are you going to do?"

"Well, I don't exactly know," Bob admitted, "but I'd been thinking about Detroit, for one thing. You know, there, Rose, there's a factory where they're building automobiles, and I thought that if maybe I could get started there, and learn more about machinery, I might be able to go on with my ideas."

"I think that's splendid, Bob," Rose answered, attempting to be cheerful, but there was a little catch in her voice. "And I think you would do very well there—I'm sure you would."

"Anyhow, I can try it," Bob continued. "I've got to do something. And what chance is there for me if I stay here?"

Rose shook her head.

"But that wasn't just exactly what I wanted to say, Rose," Bob tried to turn his subject in another direction, but he found difficulties besetting his path. "I—er—that is—well, I love you, Rose, and I wanted you to marry me," he burst out.

"Oh, Bob!" Rose cried happily. "Bob!" Her eyes filled with tears, but she laughed, gently and held out her hand to the boy.

"But, Rose, you understand, don't you?" He took her hand bashfully and patted it. "You see I can't ask you to really marry me until I get started at some kind of work. I don't even know whether I can get a job in Detroit or not, but I'm going to try my best. And if you—if you think—"

"Oh, Bob," Rose looked at him tenderly, "don't you know I'd go any place with you? I don't care."

"You're wonderful, Rose, but I can't ask you to share my hardships. I want you to have everything—everything I can give you. Protective manhood was asserting itself. "I don't think it would be fair to you to ask you to go through all this with me. But, Rose, all I want is your promise to wait for me. Will you give me that?"

"Of course I will, Bob," Rose assented.

"Well, with you in my mind I know I'm going to make good," Bob squeezed the girl's hand tightly. "Why, just thinking that you're back here, waiting for me, will make me find a job. I'll be something to work for. And I'm coming back just as good as ever. I can't wait to have you wait long."

"But it will seem long," murmured Rose, wistfully.

"I know. It's going to seem like a long time to me, too," Bob pressed his sweetheart's hand. "But it will be so wonderful when we can—when we—when I do get back," he stammered.

The two sat gazing at each other, thinking only the thoughts that lovers can think. It was a great moment in both their lives. And life is made up of only a few great moments such as these. The rest is existence.

"But you're not going to give Steve Bentley a chance to take my place while I'm gone?" Bob questioned jealously, possessively.

"Bob! How could you?" Rose bridled at the thought. "Of course I won't. I never really did like Steve."

"Oh, I don't mean that I want you to sit here and never do anything while I'm gone," Bob threw out his chest, feeling that he could afford to be generous now that he was the complete victor. "But I don't like him. I don't like him snooping around too much. I don't trust him."

"Don't worry, Bob," Rose patted his hand. "You can trust me."

Defense Opens In Damage Suit Against Doctor

of them, that she spent a terrible night after taking that kind of medicine.

"I treated Mrs. Frederick on March 23, 1924, for the last time. I had advised her to move into a room that was light, but she would not follow my instructions in numerous ways."

Dr. George E. Pfaffler, of Philadelphia, one of America's most noted X-ray specialists, was then called as a defense witness. In qualifying, Dr. Pfaffler said that he is at present professor in X-ray teaching at the University of Pennsylvania, director of the X-ray department at several of the largest hospitals in Philadelphia and has written over 200 articles on X-ray treatment and research work.

"In 1923 the X-ray treatment for a fibroid tumor thought to be malignant, was a proper course and recognized course of treatment to take," testified Dr. Pfaffler. "The treatment that Dr. Strouse gave Mrs. Frederick, as he described it, was perfectly proper."

"There are certain people who are much more susceptible to X-ray than others and there is no way of ascertaining in advance whether they are or not."

In the plaintiff evidence, it was testified by a doctor who treated Mrs. Frederick after Dr. Strouse had treated her, that he had used Scarlet Red to place on the wound.

"Scarlet Red is an irritant and we particularly avoid the use of Scarlet Red following X-ray treatment," testified Dr. Pfaffler.

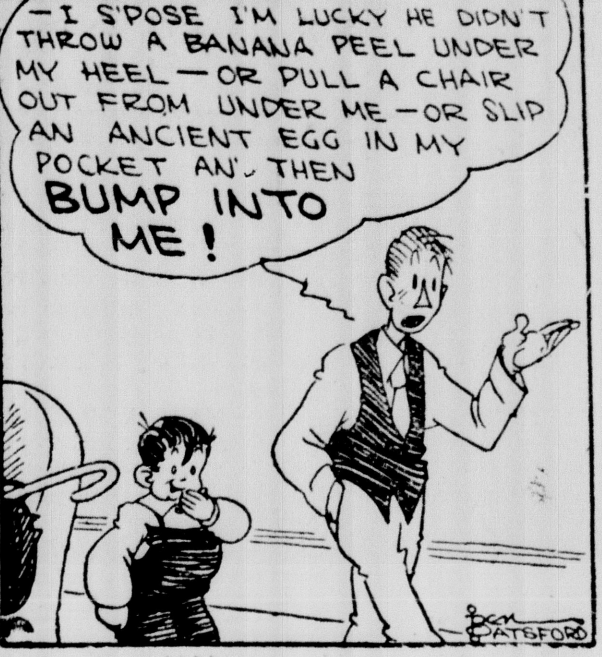

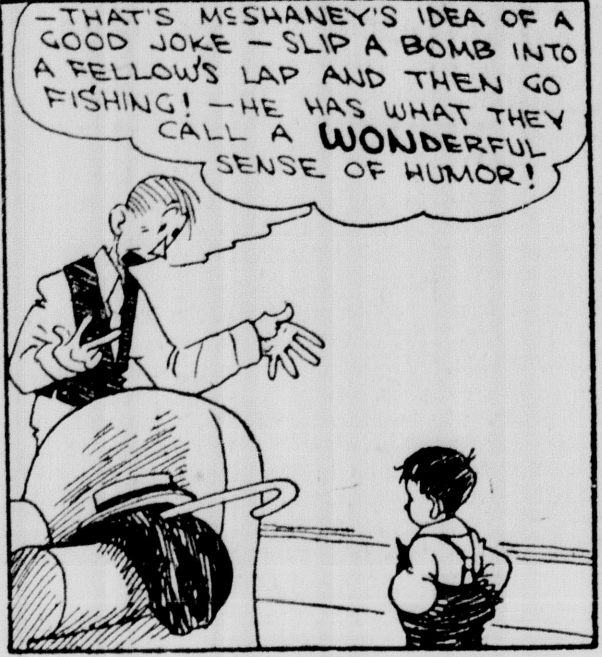

"I would say that in the case of Mrs. Frederick the X-ray treatment has arrested the tumor."

Under cross-examination, Dr. Pfaffler was asked several questions by Attorney Grim. The expert in answer to one question said that it was not considered good technique to administer X-ray dosage without the use of a filter. Ordinarily, Dr. Pfaffler said, a physician will not apply the X-ray when redness of the skin is quite noticeable.

Dr. Henry K. Pancoast, of Philadelphia, another of America's most prominent X-ray specialists, was called to testify as an expert for the defense. Dr. Pancoast said that he is at present professor of radiology in the graduate school of the University of Pennsylvania and has been in charge of the X-ray department of the University of Pennsylvania since 1902. His testimony was in corroboration of Dr. Pfaffler in general.

"The X-ray treatment was proper in the case of Mrs. Frederick in 1923, as described by Dr. Strouse, for a fibroid tumor.

"In my opinion, had not the patient been treated in 1923 she would have been dead by this time. The treatment has certainly checked the progress of the disease."

"The general condition of health of Mrs. Frederick might retard her recovery. An irritation of any kind such as might be caused by the application of a hot water bag, electric pad, hot bath, Scarlet Red, or a diabetic condition might retard the healing of the wound following X-ray treatment. The recognized treatment is X-ray followed by a surgical operation."

built in 1899, but was later replaced by the present concrete bridge.

"Grace Episcopal Church, Hulmeville, was formerly a mission station of St. James's Church, Bristol. A Sunday School was organized about 1826, and an occasional service was held in the old school-house. Mr. Ridgeway was the first rector."

"A post-office was established at Hulmeville, 1809, and Isaac Hulme was appointed postmaster. A public library was organized about 1870."

"Most of the buildings mentioned were erected very early, and have since disappeared. Hulmeville is still engaged in manufacturing."

"The Dawn" May Make Moonlight Hop Tonight

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Me., Oct. 19 (I.N.S.)—Possibility of a hop to Copenhagen, Denmark, between 11 p. m., and midnight tonight by moonlight loomed today for the amphibian airplane "The Dawn." Weight tests were rushed on the beach here under the direction of Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson.

Fog and rain held away today but the predictions of clearing weather for the evening caused Mrs. Grayson to confer with Pilot Wilmer Stultz over the possibility of a moonlight hop. The tide will be low between 11 p. m. and midnight, giving room for the runway at the take-off. The next low tide will be around 1 p. m., Thursday.

The weight of "The Dawn" and her load, estimated at 11,500 pounds, was the largest weight two motors of the Wright Whirlwind type have been called on to lift in a take-off. The weight tests today were made by means of jack scales.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (I.N.S.)—The new radio beacon to be placed on top of Los Angeles city hall will be named "Lindbergh Light," it was announced today by the Aeronautics Division of the Commerce Department. It will be in operation by January 1.

ALTAIR GUILD TO MEET

A meeting of the altar guild of St. Paul's Chapel will be held this evening at 7.15 o'clock. At 7.45 the weekly Wednesday evening instruction service will be held in the church. Rev. Jules Prevost will be in charge.

Retail Price of Food Advanced 1% in Month

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (I.N.S.)—With the advent of fall the cost of living is advancing.

Retail prices of food advanced about 1 per cent. in September over August, while wholesale prices of various commodities jumped 1-1/3 per cent. during the same period, the Department of Labor announced today.

However, retail food prices are nearly 3 per cent. below those in September a year ago, while wholesale prices are 3 1/4 per cent. lower.

Strictly fresh eggs registered the highest increase in food prices, advancing 16 per cent. Pork chops rose 8 per cent., butter, 4 per cent., canned salmon and oranges, 3 per cent., while cheese, lard and cornmeal increased 2 per cent.

On the other hand onions decreased

14 per cent.; cabbage, 7 per cent.; potatoes, 6 per cent.; prunes, 3 per cent., and flour, 2 per cent.

Advances in hogs, calves, beef steers, cotton, eggs and lemons, caused a rise in wholesale prices of farm products. Corn and wheat declined sharply.

Wholesale prices of food stuffs were generally higher than in August, particularly with butter, cheese and most meats. Hides and leather products advanced slightly, as did textiles and coal, while petroleum products were somewhat cheaper.

Iron and steel products averaged lower than in August. Lumber was also cheaper, while no change in the general level was reported for brick and Portland cement.

Among the cities where the average cost of food increased were: Newark, 4 per cent.; New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, 2 per cent. In Scranton, the increase was 1 per cent.

THE NEW ERA IN TELEPHONE COMMUNICATION

It takes less than half as long to make an out-of-town call today as it did seven years ago.

The average time required in 1920 was four minutes. Today, it is less than two minutes.

If you called a point over 200 miles away in 1920, you waited about fifteen minutes for the connection.

Today very few such calls require as much as ten minutes, and most of them go through in less than five minutes.

An outstanding accomplishment!

Greater speed has brought a tremendous increase in the use of out-of-town service.

This new-era art is making neighbors of a whole nation—and already has brought within the sound of your voice practically the entire English-speaking world.

"We that live to please must please to live"

... so spoke Samuel Johnson when he opened a London theatre some century and a half ago. Today it is even truer of the people who advertise to you.

Whether merchants or manufacturers—whether they advertise hats or harnesses, powder-puffs or ploughs—the permanent success of every advertiser who uses these pages rests squarely upon his ability to please you.

The goods he advertises must be right. They must meet your approval in open comparison. They must please you in utility, design, quality, value and service. If they don't, you won't buy. And if you won't buy, the advertiser can't live.

That's why advertised merchandise must be good merchandise—and that's why there is protection, true economy and real satisfaction in reading the advertisements and being guided by them.

Advertising guides you to products that please. Read it regularly.
